Site Name	Link	Comments
Behaviour 4 Learning		This website is developed by the Teacher Training Agency in the UK. It has some good articles and resources on the subject of behaviour, including an excellent glossary.
National Behaviour Support Service		The National Behaviour Support Service was established in 2006, their work with schools is carried out by a multi-disciplinary team.
ADD Online Support Group		Adders.org is a site run by parents of a boy with ADD. His mother has now also been diagnosed with ADD. It also has a list of support groups in Ireland.
Conduct Disorders		Again, another website run by parents. It has an interesting parents' discussion board, which deal with a variety of topics, including special education, diet, substance abuse.
Improving Behaviour in Schools		This is an invaluable site, under the UK Department for Education and Skills, with easy access to DfES policy and publications on this issue, also interesting case studies. A related site gives information on the BIP (Behaviour Improvement Programme)
TCD Anti-Bullying Centre		This website gives information on the ABC programme run by Trinity College Dublin.
No Bully (New Zealand)		Kia Kaha (Stand Strong) is a New Zealand anti-bullying programme for schools worth looking at.

Social, Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties Association

This UK multi-disciplinary organisation produce a journal called 'Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties', and abstracts of each article can be read online. Its Publications section and Resources list are also useful.
