Updates 2017

NCSE is seeking applications for secondment opportunities at Advisor level for Teachers NCSE Support Service

A number of fulltime secondment positions at Advisor level are required to support the work of the new NCSE Support Service.

Expertise and experience in the areas of behaviour at primary level and Autistic Spectrum Disorder at primary and post-primary level is desirable for the position of Advisor.

An Advisor will have the task of assisting the NCSE Support Service in the delivery of relevant and effective support to school communities in the area of special education. An Advisor will report to the NCSE Support Service senior management team.

NCSE - Teacher CPD Database for Inclusion and Special Educational Needs

This database is an online reference tool designed to provide practical support to teachers looking for continuous professional development opportunities in the area of inclusion and special educational needs. It brings together in one place an extensive range of information relating to CPD options, delivered by a variety of different providers.

To this end, the database does not seek to replace information from individual providers, but rather acts as an initial source of general information and a 'signposting' mechanism for further information.
